III. THE FEATURES OF IMMOVABLE PROPERTY OWNERSHIP AND EASEMENT

ARTICLE 3- Immovable property ownership is a private ownership comprising immovable property ownership, land share, as well as the mutual zones of the main landed estate.

(Amendment of date:28.11.2007-5711/Article 1)

Condominium ownership and immovable easement are established by clearly indicating, in line with the collective ownership principles, the building plot share which has been allocated in its project proportionally with the values calculated according to the location and magnitude of each independent part of main real estate which is subject to this ownership. If the building plot shares have not been allocated proportionally with the shares of independent parts each condominium owner or immovable easement holder can apply to the court for re-arrangement of building plot shares. The building plot share which has been allocated to each independent part according to this paragraph shall not be able to be changed due to future increases or decreases in the values of said parts. The provisions of Article 44 are reserved. Immovable property easement is a kind of easement type which depends on the land share and it is, according to the conditions set forth in this Law, converted to the condominium ownership upon request of land owner or collective owners owning the immovable property easement, or one of them, from land register office after the occupancy certificate is received

IV- MUTUAL ZONES

ARTICLE 4- Mutual zones can be made more explicit by means of a contract or agreement.

The places and things enlisted below are considered as mutual zones under every circumstance.

(Amendment of date:28.11.2007-5711/Article 2)

1. Foundations, main walls, "cross beams, columns, and curtain walls which constitute the load bearing system and other elements of load bearing system" party or joining walls which separate the independent parts , ceilings, and floors, gardens, main entrance gates, entrance corridors, stairs, elevators, corridors and if available sinks and WCs, rooms or flat belonging to the cleaning staff of the building, laundry rooms or laundry rying rooms(if available), parking grounds, special room for the heating system equipment, box rooms and closed areas in which electricity and water clocks are situated, fountains or water depots, or water depots equipment areas.

App. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6

B) – JOINTS

I- Joints between free zones and land share.

ARTICLE 5- In case of transfer or inheritance of the property estate ownership, the related land share is passed as well.

Unlike condominium ownership and immovable easement, land share can not be transferred by inheritance and can not be registered with another right. Nor can landshare be transferred solely. Without the transfer of condominium ownership and immovable easment, this is out of the question.

Under no circumstances can land share be excluded from the main landed estate unless it is attached to the condominium ownership or immovable easement.

As for the main landed estate, no land share can be excluded from any attachment to condominium ownership or established immovable easement.

All rights registered on condominiums have binding registration features upon the land share. No kind of easement having no relation to this right can be established on the land which is subject to immovable easement.

Before the condominium is established, all immovable property rights which have had been entered into the official record or been annotated on the official register page are automatically registered, proportional with the proportion of land share.

II. CORRELATION BETWEEN MUTUAL ZONES AS WELL AS THE INDEPENDENT AND ADDITIONAL PARTS

ARTICLE 6 - Additional parts such as coal or water depots, garage, electricity, gas or water meter cages and toilets are not included in the independent parts, but they are considered as the complementing joints of the independent parts that they belong to. It is for this reason that the owner of the particular part is considered as the sole owner of the additional parts.

Additional parts are registered in the declaration section of the immovable property official register and those parts excluding the grounds of the main building are shown separately in the Cadastre Plan or in the title deed (Tapu) map.

Concerning the independent parts, establishment of any sort of easement which does not comply with the rights of apartment owners or condominiums is out of the question.

In case of rental, transfer or registry of the independent parts to someone else, the additional parts as well as the mutual ones will automatically be transferred, registered or rented to that person.

C) ABROGATION OF PARTNERSHIP AND THE RIGHT OF PRIVILEGED PURCHASE:

ARTICLE 7 -Demanding the abrogation of the act of being a shareholder, concerning the landed estate which is subject to condominium ownership or immovable easement is out of the question. However, it is possible to abrogate shareholdership for independent parts due to the fact that the independent parts, like an independent landed estate, can be subject to a law suit.

II. THE RIGHT TO HAVE PRECEDENCE IN PURCHASE

ARTICLE 8- (Amendment of date 13.4.1983 in clause 1-2814/ARTICLE 3)

If one of the independent parts of the land share with established condominium ownership or a land share with established immovable property easement which is sold, the other apartment owners or immovable property easement owners do not have precedence over the right to buy it.

On condition that one of the shareholders of the independent part sells his share to any of the others, the other shareholders gain the right to have precedence in purchase. A contrary term may be included, in order to implement the application otherwise.

D) IMPLEMENTATION OF THE GENERAL TERMS

ARTICLE 9- Any conflict concerning the condominium ownership is to be resolved by the Civil Code or other codes, in cases when there is no particular term included in the contract among shareholders, or in the administration plan.

Nevertheless, the tenant(s)' liability is limited to the rent that he has to pay. For this reason the extra payment that he makes is to be reduced from the amount of rent he has to pay. Unless the debt of the immovable property owner is charged in this way, the process with regard to the legal mortgage right is put into effect by the written request of one of the other apartment owners.

In cases when one part of the main landed estate is damaged and has to be repaired, if either the undamaged internal or the external parts of the mutual or independent part of the property has to be entered, the tenants, owners or any other residents of the property have the legal requirement to give the permission of entry.

As for the written authorisation permission stated above, the owners of the independent estate who have been given authorisation permission on their part have to, without delay, pay for the loss charged to the owners of the repaired apartment, or the tenants, or the people who benefit from the estate. Filing an action against such an apartment owner for paying the value of property of independent division at the nearest date to the resolution to him / her and transferring the ownership rights to other apartment owners proportionally with their building plot shares is possible. This is only possible if the other apartment owners agree to a majority resolution by number and building plot share, unless otherwise has been previously anticipated. If majority votes are not received then the suit is filed by the rest of the apartment owners and the judge, before s/he passes a decision, an appropriate time is given to the claimants to pay the transfer value in a three-month time deposit bank account for payment to the right owner in the future and to submit the receipt. When the document as per this payment is submitted and in case of the acceptance of law suit the judge adjudicates to transfer the ownership of independent division of respondent to claimant apartment owners in proportion to their land shares and to pay the transfer value and its accrued interest to respondent.

Below are situations which are considered as the unbearable violation of claimant owners' rights as indicated in the clause 1 of the law.

1. the apartment owner's being taken to the enforcement office three times within a period of 24 months due to his overdue debts,

2. despite the judge's decision, on the basis of Article 33, the defendant owner's resistance of paying of his debts, and therefore, his continual violation of other owners' rights in this respect,

(Amendment of date:28.11.2007-5711/Article 12)

3. The defendant owner's violation of ethical and moral rules by using his independent part of the property as a bawdy house. If the right to file a lawsuit in this article is not used within six months from the date in which the decision of the apartment owners to file lawsuit regarding transfer of ownership is made and within five years from the point when a right to file lawsuit may arise or if the reason of lawsuit has disappeared, then the action is dismissed.

App. 19

B- THE DEBTS OF THE IMMOVABLE PROPERTY EASEMENT OWNERS

ARTICLE 26- The owners of the immovable property easement, upon the right of the shared land in question, have mutual obligations over the due payment of debts arising from the completion of the construction. They are also obliged to ease the processes of construction in compliance with the principles (principles on what is right) set up by the authority.

(Amendment of date:28.11.2007-5711/Article 13)

If one of immovable property easement owners does not pay his / her debts within two months despite notification sent by the notary public, then the judge, upon the written request of others, adjudicates to transfer that particular owners building plot share and property easement to the other stakeholders in proportion with their building plot shares.

If the construction is not completed within the legally-set deadlines and this stems from the negligence of an apartment owner, abatement of the apartment is put into effect. As a consequence, the negligent party is to indemnify the loss he caused to the others.

If the main landed estate consists of eight or more than eight independent parts, the appointment of an Property Manager is a requirement. If all the parts of the main landed estate are owned by only one person, this owner is legally considered as the manager.

The manager is appointed by unanimous votes of the apartment owners. The manager is appointed at the legal board meeting of the apartment owners; an ex-manager can be re-elected or re-appointed. If the apartment owners cannot agree on the appointment of a manager, nor can they agree on the management of the main landed estate, then a manager is appointed by the Court of peace in the jurisdiction, upon the petitioning of one of the apartment owners (and if possible, upon the hearing of the other apartment owners' statements). The manager has to reveal these documents to the management board. Upon 50% majority of the apartment owner's demand (no matter what their land share is) the manager can be asked to render those documents to them at any time, regardless of the specified dates on the management plan.

IV – RIGHTS

ARTICLE 40 – As a general rule, the manager has the same rights of a proxy in principle.

If the apartment owners fail to pay for their debts on time, despite notice served by the notary public, the manager has the right to resign from his position without having to pay any compensation to the other property owners. He can also, by terminating his part of the contract, demand indemnification of his/her losses arising from this event from the other apartment owners.

The manager can demand a suitable wage from apartment owners even if a fee is not specified in the management plan or the contract he/she signed.

(Amendment of date, 13.04.1983- 2814/ Article 13) The association of apartment owners decides whether the manager will participate in the administration costs of the main landed estate or not. If so, they decide the ratio of this participation. In the absence of such a decision, the manager participates in the administration costs of the main landed estate at the percentage of 50%.

E) AUDIT OF MANAGEMENT

ARTICLE 41 – The management board, observes and controls the practices of the manager and has the right to replace the manager in case of the occurrence of a rightful cause.

If there is not a set date for the audit of accounts in the management plan; it is done once every three months; however, the audit of the accounts can be done at any time necessary if a rightful cause arises.

The management board can either assign someone from amongst themselves (based on the number of votes or majority of land shares) or designate a board of auditors composed of three members. If there is not a particular date indicated, they submit their evaluation report to the management board and include the details of their comments on the way the main landed estate is managed in their evaluation report. This report, after being copied for each owner, is sent to the apartment owners via a posted letter which is to be signed by the recipient.

The auditors are to write all their judgements and other issues to be indicated on a notary sealed and approved book and sign it after marking each page with the date and numbering them starting from number 1.

F) RENEWALS AND ADDITIONAL PARTS

I – BENEFICIAL ONES

ARTICLE 42 – The apartment owners do not have the right to make any changes or repairs in any shared parts of the main landed estate. Any form of renewal or additional construction which are to the owners benefit and provide an increased benefit of better and comfortable use of the mutual zones is to be decided upon by a majority votes of the immovable property owners based upon their land share majority. The cost of these renewals or additional constructions is calculated and paid by the ones who profit from those parts with respect to the proportion of the profit gained.

(Annex: 10.12.1990 – Decree – 431 / Article 1; originally approved of date : 05.02.1992 – 3770 / Article 1)

If the decision to transform a central heating to individual heating is accepted, provisions of the management plan against this decision shall be deemed to have been ammended and expenditures for joint works to be done for this purpose shall be covered based on the proportion of land shares.

II - COSTLY AND LUXURY MODIFICATIONS

ARTICLE 43 – If the renewals, or modifications requested are too costly or bear luxury quality regarding the state of the building, and they do not take place in the essential parts or common access areas used by all the apartment owners, the owner who do not wish to benefit from the renewed part, do not have to participate in the payment of such expenses. Expenses as such are paid by the apartment owners who feel the need for the renewals or modifications to be made. However, if any apartment owner who originally did not contribute to the costs of such renewal expenses but later decided to do otherwise by paying for the amount he has to pay which is proportional to the land share he possesses, they will attain the right to benefit from those modified parts.

III – ADDITIONAL INDEPENDENT PARTS

ARTICLE 44 – For the constructional addition of an indepentent floor on top of the main landed estate, or on an existing penthouse or any additional construction on the ground floor or post-construction of parts which are in the vacant spaces of the land:

1. Unanimous decisions of the management board is required.
2. Identification of the re-allocated land share, including the renewal and additional parts, according to the new state of the main landed estate. This identification is to be made unanimously,
3. When the allocation of the land share of the new independent part is added, it is obligatory that all the independent parts of the main landed estate be registered in the easement column of the apartment owners Registry Book after Immoveable Property Easment is established regarding Article 14 of the law.

It is also obligatory that these procedures be carried out by an official contract and with the presence of the title deed officer. It is essential to maintain connection and parallelism between the previous register page of the main landed estate and the terms of Article 13. In this respect, on condition that the cost of the lesser share of those apartment owners is paid, the newly constructed independent part, to be transferred as apartment ownership, becomes the possession or property of the person or people who had it constructed. The newly constructed independent part is registered in the Immovable Property Ownership Register Book on a separate page in the name of new owner or owners.

App. 28

G) TRANSFERS AND IMPORTANT TASKS

ARTICLE 45 – The registration of a main landed estate with a right, or allotment of a land and the transfer of the allotted part's ownership to someone else and alienated investments as such or rental of the roof or external walls of the main building for the purpose of displaying advertisements can only be held with the decision made as a result of unanimous votes of the apartment owners.

SECTION 6 : CESSATION OF CONDOMINIUM OWNERSHIP AND IMMOVABLE PROPERTY EASEMENT

A) Cessation of condominium ownership

ARTICLE 46 – Condominium ownership is ceased with the annulment of registration record from the condominium ownership registry book. Condominium ownership does not end with all the independent parts of the main landed estate to be assemblaged on one person's ownership.

The registration record is nulled with the written demand of all the apartment owners or the owner who have assemblaged all the independent parts to his ownership. This written demand is about the transfer of condominium ownership to unmixed ownership (adi mülkiyet) and that immovable property is registered by making reference to its prior registers by being transferred onto a new page in the general book of register. This registration is done with respect to the land shares binded to the independent parts.

If some modifications have been made after the establishment of condominium ownership with respect to the quality of the main landed estate, these are also included in the new official register. If any independent part is registered either along with an individual right annotated at its register or with a real right (ayni hak), unless that right is annulled with the written consent of its owner neither the transfer of condominium ownership on the main landed estate to unmixed property ownership nor the official registry record on the condominium ownership record can be annulled. In cases where the main landed estate with its land is completely damaged or expropriated, the annulment of the title deed record is processed with respect to the general terms.

If the main landed estate is purchased for public use under the right of eminent domain, the expropriation cost of each individual part is calculated by the separate consideration of the land share that it occupies as well as the additional parts and this cost is paid to the apartment owner himself.

In circumstances when the owner of the right refuses the annulment of the right on the register record but gives a consent on the transfer of his own right to the mutual ownership shares (as a whole) depending on the feature of his debt or the ownership shares upon the debtor, the registration on the General Book of Register is carried out with respect to his remaining ownership shares after the payment of his debts.

II. EXTREME DAMAGE TO THE MAIN BUILDING

ARTICLE 47- If the main building is completely damaged, the condominium ownership on that particular building will automatically cease to exist. If any of the independent part is completely damaged and the owner of that particular part fails to have it repaired within two years after the destruction, the rest of the apartment owners of the other independent parts, a year after the expiry of the allotted period, can ask the judge for the transfer of landshare in question of the damaged part in return for its value. If the judgement of such a transfer is made, it is allocated with respect to each owner's land shares. As for the explicit clause above, when the immovable property easement is ceased, its record on the book of real estate register is annulled.

Land shares transferred in this way are marked onto the related pages on the declaration column of apartment ownership register book.

The owners who had the land shares transferred to themselves are obliged to have the damaged part reconstructed within two years after the date of the transfer or they are obliged to do so within the same allotted period, calculate their land shares attached to the independent parts and have them registered into the apartment ownership register book. This calculation is made with respect to the terms indicated in Article 3 , clause 2 of this law. If those apartment owners who demanded the transfer fail to comply with the terms of the clause stated above, the apartment ownership upon the main landed estate automatically ceases to exist and shared ownership terms are exercised both upon the insurance cost of the extremely damaged parts of the real landed estate. In particular circumstances when more than one independent part is completely damaged and the reconstruction of one of those parts depend on or affect the reconstruction of the other parts, the apartment owners whose independent parts are damaged have to notify the rest of the apartment owners on whether they will have their parts re-constructed or not. The deadline determined for this notification is six months after the destruction. The land shares of the apartment owners who fail to send this notification are transferred primarily to the others who wish to have their part re-constructed in consideration of its value.

Failure to send notification is regarded as reluctance to have the property reconstructed. Condominium ownership upon the completely damaged independent parts is automatically transferred into immovable property easement taking as a basis, the allotted deadlines and periods indicated in this law, and this is annotated as 'temporary' onto the declaration column of the related pages of the Condominium ownership Register Book. When the reconstruction of the damaged independent part is completed, the condominium ownership upon the property in question is re-gained; consequently, the 'temporary' annotation is removed from the register book.

III. THE ASSIGNMENT OF NOTIFICATION AND OMISSION OF THE REGISTER

ARTICLE 48- In circumstances when the main landed estate or the main building is damaged either partially or completely, the manager has to inform the real estate registration office, located in the jurisdiction of the landed estate in question, about it. He also has to inform all the apartment owners. In case of the absence of an appointed manager, this task of informing the real estate registration office is handled by the owner(s) whose independent part is damaged.

The loss that stems from negligence of informing the real estate registration office binding upon all parties, the apartment owner whose independent part is damaged, and one fifth of the loss is binding upon the manager. In other words, the owner of the damaged part and the manager have joint liability over the loss arising from this negligence of information, but the Treasury does not have any liability.

When the condominium ownership is ceased, the related pages on the Condominium Ownership Register Book are closed, the registration of the landed estate is proportional to land shares in accordance with the sections left undamaged. On the basis of shared ownership terms, those parts are registered onto the general register book. In this case, shared ownership terms are valid upon the obliterated parts together with insurance costs.

Should a new construction be built on the land of the completely damaged main building, the terms on apartment ownership and immovable property easement are applied on owner's or associate owners' demand.

B) CESSATION OF IMMOVABLE PROPERTY EASEMENT

ARTICLE 49- The owner or associate owners of the land which is subject to immovable property easement can have the register record of immovable property easement erased and cease this easement at any time they wish. For this cessation to be practiced, they are to submit a written declaration to the title deed officer. Immovable property easement is cancelled in a self-regulatory way, upon the total destruction or expropriation of the land which is subject to immovable property easement.

(Amended clause of date: 13.4.1983-2814/Article 14):

On the land subject to immovable property easement, unless a building is constructed in accordance with the plan submitted in the course of the establishment of the immovable property easement within five years, a justice of the peace, after talking to the people involved if necessary, decides to give an extension of a defined period or decides that it is cancelled. This period can be extended by the request of one of the owners.

SECTION 7: CLOSING TERMS

A) PROHIBITIONS:

ARTICLE 50- After this law is put into effect, with respect to the Civil Code or the other laws, easement rights cannot be established to enable one of the shareholders of a landed estate to benefit from a particular part of that landed estate in the same way as the apartment owner does. Nor can condominium ownership be established upon buildings with particular construction features.

Unless this is done, immovable property easement rights are annulled. In such a circumstance, only associate ownership is continued.

The transfer of ownership upon the landed estate to condominium ownership, as denoted in clause 1 and its registration in the book of condominium ownership is carried out with the application of one of the associate owners to the title deed office. A photograph, the details of which are indicated in the Article

12 clause (b) of the law, is also essential for the associate owner to apply to the title deed office and the photograph, with his signature, is to be authenticated by this associate owner. The other associate owners do not have the right to object to this transfer, nor can they refrain from participating in its costs and preparing an administration plan. If they refrain from doing so, the terms of Article 33 concerning the interference of the judge are implemented

ARTICLE 52- Some specific rights which had been established under the name of 'room and space rights' before the Civil Code was put into effect, are transferred into condominium ownership or immovable property easement.

1. Upon the availability of particular construction parts which are subject to these rights on the landed estate; the owners of these rights, with respect to the mutual ownership regulations taking place in the Civil Code, can establish condominium ownership without having to pay any cost. This establishment of condominium ownership is settled through an agreement that is to be made among all parties and it is upon the land of that particular landed estate. The establishment is also settled with respect to the proportion of value of the parts that each one of them possesses.

2. In cases when the constructed parts are not available, or rather the 'room or space right' is available; this right, with regard to clause (a) of this law, is transferred to immovable property easement and its registration is carried out accordingly.

All the rest of the owners of these rights are informed about these implementations later on. The cost of transfer of rights into condominium ownership or immovable easement ownership is paid by the Treasury, and later charged from the owners of the rights, taking the regulations of the law concerning Public Claim Collection (Liquidation) into consideration.

The owners of the rights, within a month after the date of acknowledgement, can object to such implementations of the title deed office by applying to the Court of Peace and bringing a law suit.

ARTICLE 53- Before the law in question is put into effect, the easment rights which were established in order to enable one of the co-owners of an landed estate to make use of one part of the landed estate as an apartment owner, the rules of law in question are applied with regard to participating in the administration of the landed estate, the necessity for preparing an administration plan and the related expenses and of insurance and its premiums until the transfer to condominium ownership is completed.

Section 9. Special Provisions Regarding Mass Buildings Scope

ARTICLE 66- Mass building refers to multiple structures which have been / will be constructed in line with a certain certified layout plan on one or more building parcel(s) and which are connected to each other by infrastructure facilities, common usage areas, social facilities and services and management of these facilities.

The building parcels in scope of mass building should be adjacent or neighboring parcels. However, it is not necessary for the places between these parcels which, according to the building zone plan, have been allocated to public services such as road, public square, open space area, park, parking lot. Each building parcel in scope of mass building is distinctly taken into account during establishment of construction servitude and condominium ownership. However, if the mass building includes multiple building plans a condominium ownership relation cannot be established between individual parcels according to mass building provisions.

As the buildings are completed, the construction servitudes which belong to the completed buildings may be changed to the condominium ownership.

Common Places

ARTICLE 67- The parcels which are in scope of mass building and which have been allocated to common use and benefit of independent divisions in this scope are registered into title deeds registry by writing the plot, parcel, block and independent division numbers of other parcels in scope of mass building to which they have been allocated and they become the common places of independent divisions located in the parcels allocated to them.

Common social and infrastructure facilities of multiple structures in scope of mass building are deemed the common places of independent divisions to which they have been allocated regardless their parcel and structure.

Site Plans and Projects

ARTICLE 68- In mass buildings the locations of buildings, common places and facilities, their use types and purposes covering whole parcel or parcels in scope of mass building are indicated in the site plan and projects which have been prepared according to the provisions of building plan approved by the relevant authorities as a whole.

Arrangement, operation, and maintenance of public spaces can be undertaken by the mass building management in case a mutual understanding has been made with the authorized public institute and provided that the use by public is not restricted. The issues regarding establishment of condominium ownership and construction servitude, required documents, and transactions to be made at title deeds registry office are arranged in a Regulation to be issued by the Ministry of Public Works and Settlement.

Management

ARTICLE 69- Each block of building having common places in the main structure which covers multiple independent divisions on the parcel and parcels in scope of mass building, regarding its own problems and common places solely belong to it, is managed by the board of block condominium owners constituted by the owners of independent divisions at that block. If there are non-block structures on a parcel or if such structures and block structures are at the same parcel, then this parcel, regarding its problems and common places solely belong to it, is managed by the board of condominium owners constituted by the owners of independent divisions at that parcel. The management type of blocks and non-block structures is additionally indicated in the management plan.

If there are multiple parcels on a plot then the common places of these parcels which constitute the plot are managed by the board of plot condominium owners constituted by the owners of independent divisions at that plot and the management style is determined by this board, save for the mandatory provisions of law. This authority may be given to the board of plot representatives in the management plan. Unless otherwise arranged in the management plan, the board of plot representatives consists of the block managers who are voted by the independent division owners in each block and representatives who are voted by the independent division owners of non-block structures. The number and selection method of the members of board of plot representatives are indicated in the management plan by taking the structure of mass building into account. These managers and representatives have the right to vote as the number of independent divisions which they manage and represent.

The common places, spaces, and facilities in scope of mass building are managed by the board of mass building condominium owners constituted by the owners of independent divisions at that mass building and the management style is determined by this board, save for the mandatory provisions of law. This authority may be given to the board of mass building representatives in the management plan. Unless otherwise arranged in the management plan, the board of mass building representatives consists of the block managers who are voted by the independent division owners in each block and representatives who are voted by the independent division owners of non-block structures. The number and selection method of the members of board of mass building representatives are indicated in the management plan by taking the structure of mass building into account. These managers and representatives have the right to vote as the number of independent divisions which they manage and represent.

Management Plan and Amendment of This Plan

ARTICLE 70- A single management plan is arranged for the structures and places in scope of mass building. The management plan is binding on all condominium owners at that mass building. To be able to amend this management plan four fifth of all votes represented by the members of mass building representatives are needed.

The provisions of management plan regarding temporary management can be changed by the four fifth of the votes of independent division owners at the mass building area.

Assignment of Manager and Auditor

ARTICLE 71- Unless otherwise arranged in the management plan, a manager and auditor are assigned by the board of block condominium owners for the block, condominium owners at the parcel on which are non-block structures for the common places and spaces which have been allocated to them, and board of mass building representatives for all common places, spaces and facilities in scope of whole mass building.

Block manager and auditor are voted by the majority of condominium owners in the block. The manager and auditor of the common places and facilities of non-block structures are voted by the majority of the condominium owners in these structures by the number and building plot share. And the manager and auditor of all common places, spaces and facilities in scope of mass building are voted by the majority of the number of independent divisions represented by the managers and representatives who attend in the board of mass building representatives.

The resolutions made by block condominium owners, mass building representatives, and temporary board of directors resolutions are in scope of documents specified in the first paragraph of Article 68 of the Execution and Bankruptcy Law no. 2004. Condominium owners cannot avoid from paying mass building common expense share and advance payment to be collected declaring that they abdicate from their right to use common places, spaces and facilities in scope of mass building or claiming that these areas are located on another parcel or on public places or they do not need to use them because of the status of their independent divisions or of their own status.

In this case, the management plan arranges the provisions on the issues such as establishment procedures and task period of temporary management. Temporary management may last by one year from the completion of mass building at the latest. This period cannot be longer than ten years from the obtainment of first occupancy certificate in scope of mass building, in any case.
